Course Description:

This course offers the novel format of interactive microscopy to present practical solutions to common dilemmas in classification and reporting of gynecological and breast biopsy specimens. Learners will be able to preview digital slides of actual biopsy specimens on their own electronic device (computer, laptop, tablet) in the weeks prior to the course. At the live course, each digital slide case will be presented with an emphasis on audience interaction and discussion with the faculty. The course will navigate a high volume of digital slide cases with selected practical teaching points on classification and/or reporting for each case. Learners will be able to claim CME credit for the pre-event independent previewing of the cases as well as for the live course event.
